Count the advertisers who have stuck to this paper. Count them one by one. Have they been successful? Are they the big merchants of the town today? Think it over. Then maybe you'll get in line.

The fall season is here. This country has arranged to loan $500,000,000 to Great Britain and France. Are you still creaking hard times? Maybe a little judgment and business push would help you.

Ballot Box Muddle Finds Way Into Court

As a result of the alleged false return of the votes cast at No. 5 precinct in Hempfield township, on primary election day, September 21, Ben Steele. Republican candidate for county commissioner, through Attorney Joseph A McCurdy, made an appeal to the court of common pleas of Westmoreland county on Thursday morning, asking that the ballot box of that precinct be re-opened; that all matters that pretain to any fraud or error in the first count of the ballots may be exposed. The court is asked that after the ballots are examined and counted to make such decree as right and justice may require. Notice of the appeal was served on the county commissioners at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Attorneys J. A. McCurdy, representing Ben Steele, and W. T. Dom, county solicitor, appeared before Judge Doty at 11:30 o'clock yesterday, and presented to him the petition. The judge directed the Prothonotary W. Dick Hunter to cause to be issued at once subpoenas for the members of the election board and all others oncerned, and that a thorough investigation be made. Judge Doty further fixed Wednesday, Oct. 6 at 9 o'clock a. m. for the beginning of the investigation.

Raid Booze Sellers

County Detective F. H. Mitchell of Washington county, got into quick action at the Burgettstown fair yesterday in rounding up alleged illegal booze sellers and other violators. With all of his alertness, however, he was not quick enough for one man who jumped from a load of booze and took to the woods.

Two men representing the Tri-State Express company were attempting to deliver beer in the open near the cemetery or just handy to the fair grounds. Mitchell confiscated the booze, claiming that it was being delivered illegally and without orders or without being consigned to any person where it was being delivered. George Sherosky was arrested and waived a hearing for court. Representatives of the same express company were arrested one day before this week for operating their wagon.

Hunt For Thief

Detectives Felix Slovinsky and William Hunt of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad, were in Monessen this week trying to locate a man who has broken into the freight cars of the company. The man is a well known ex convict and has a record behind him. He was discovered in this vicinity and the detectives have been on his trail for some time. He was seen on the streets of Monessen and the officers expect to land their man soon.

Auto Recovered

The stolen automobile of John Kittle of Speers, was reported to have been recovered by the police of Pittsburgh and Mr. Kittle went to that city to bring back his car Details as to the method of recovery are lacking, but it is understood no arrests were made.

Young Man Injured

Emmett Cadwallader,who is known as the champion "hard luck guy" of the Monongahela valley, has just met with another accident that will keep him from work for some time. Mr. Cadwallader, a carpenter by trade, has figured in more accidents of a serious nature, during his life than three ordinary men should, and he has proven himself a poor risk for accident insurance.

Tuesday evening while chopping at a 2x4, the hatchet glanced off and caught him on the wrist of the other hand, severing two arteries. Prompt medical attention probably saved his life, as he was growing weak from the loss of blood.

He has only recently left the hospital, having undergone an operation for appendicitis, and a short time before that, he had the misfortune to have a finger taken off on a joiner. Two years ago he met with an accident that almost proved fatal, when he fell a distance of 35 feet from the roof of the Pittsburgh Steel office He was confined to his bed for some time before he fully recovered from his injuries.

A year before that accident he was scarred for life when a piece broke out of a turn lathe and flying through the air struck him on the forehead. About seven years ago his series of mishaps began when he had two fingers of one hand taken off in a joiner.

Went Through Fence

Washington, Pa., Oct. 1—Speeding around the Arden track yesterday afternoon at a mile a minute clip, Guy Woodward's Ford racer crashed through the fence on the lower turn. Woodward escaped without a scratch and the machine was not badly damaged, the front axle being bent and the steering apparatus put out of commission. "I am too lucky to be hurt," declared the interpid driver of the little speed car, which captured the free-for-all in the races held at Belle Vernon Woodward had his machine towed into a local garage and commenced last night to repair it We will have it ready to enter in the races that are to be held in the Arden track Saturday afternoon. From early yesterday morning until last night, the track was in constant use, most of the entrants in the motorcycle and automobile events being there to tune up and adjust their machines

Lovers of speed from all sections are expected, letters asking that large reservations of seats be made, having been received from Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Charleroi and Youngstown. The details of the W & J. W. V. U. football game will be received and announced to the spectators.

Wedding

Judge J. A. McIlvaine of Washington county, does not aspire to be known as "the marrying judge" but he can officiate in that capacity on occasion.

From boyhood, John A. McIlvaine had a firm friend in the person of "Joe" Bamford, who owned much land along the river section of the county. Later a decision in litigation favorable to Mr.Bamford further strengthened the friendship, which extended also to members of the family.

When Alfred Bamford of Monessen, son of "Joe" Bamford, wished to be married, nothing else would do but that Judge McIlvaine perform the ceremony. This the judge did in his chambers yesterday, the bride being Miss Hattie Lang of Allenport The only witness was Tipstaff Caton The court gave the couple some very excellent advice on entering the new relationship.

Once before, in the old court house, the judge married a couple.

Thanks Voters

—John E Shields, the winner for the Republican nomination for sheriff, doffs his hat to the voters of Monessen for the nice vote he received here. "Jack" says "Thank them in the most emotional terms you can command and tell them I appreciate their every effort, you bet I do."

Slayer Is Still At Large Despite Vigilant Search

Local Italians are much wrought up over the bold murder that was committed here yesterday morning when Pietro Tammorello shot to death young Gaspiero Bruno in front of the boarding house of Paladino Salvatore, where the two men had been boarding, and some of them have offered to contribute to a fund for a reward to hunt down the man who did the shooting. He is still at large, making his escape back over the hills through McMahan borough, now the Third ward. It is not known whether he got out of the reach of local officers. Constable A. J. Smith followed the man a distance, but lost track of him. The state police were dispatched here at once and everything is being done to apprehend the man.

The dead man has a cousin living on Schoonmaker avenue, Gaspero Bonafede and the body will be taken to his home some time today, from where the funeral will be held tomorrow. Yesterday's paper stated that the murdered man was the son of Gaspero Bruno, but this was an error. The two men boarded with Paladino Salvadore who is a fish salesman, but the parties are not related.

The Judicial Contest

The Judicial contest for a seat on the Common Pleas bench of Westmoreland county is on. The lines are already drawn. The ballot is non-partisan. It should be up to the voters to decide who is to be the Judge for the next ten years. Influences and prejudices should be kept out.

This paper is Republican. There can be no mistake about it. It supports all of the candidates its party nominates. It is not for the minority to say the right men have not been chosen. We believe in majority rule. Our individual choice is sometimes defeated. We are not to blame. The people are to blame. This paper will take no hand in the Judicial contest unless the issue is forced upon us. We prefer to be law abiding, and since the Judiciary is removed from partisanship by legislation, we shall respect the law and live up to its intent and purpose. Other partisan newspapers should keep out.

Both candidates have placed their names before the people. One has been on the bench for twenty years. His ability and his record are known to the people. He needs no eulogy, and he needs no defense. He should neither be ashamed of his conduct or his interpretations of the law. His administration has been positive and decisive. He has carved a record that must stand. He alone can answer to the people.

George B. Shaw is an attorney who has practiced at the bar for over twenty years. He is a product of Westmoreland county. He is clean, upright, honorable, honest, sincere and capable, and no man can speak ill of him.

Both men are qualified, but the issue of this campaign will be waged on broader lines than can be settled by the election of an individual. The campaign is being waged between the wet and dry forces. Some contend that the place to settle this question is in the legislature, while others charge the discretionary powers of the court with an influence that might be effective.

Unfortunately this question is an issue at this time and it must be settled by the voters. The ballot should be conscientiously cast and the election should be clean and uncontaminated by prejudicial influences, and it should be kept non-partisan and newspapers should not enter this contest on a partizan basis.

The selection of a Judge is a sacred thing, and it should not be done outside of the heat of passion, and since the bench is by law removed from partisan politics with its contaminating influences, it should be the duty of the press to help preserve it thus. Let this contest be a dignified one and free from mudslinging.

A Social Benefactor

"I'd rather watch a herd of cows eating grass than the best baseball game in the world," said James J. Hill, empire railroad builder. He admits he saw one baseball game in his lifetime.

Jim Hill, we'll call him by his first name, because we feel we know him so well, is one of those men history will record as a public benefactor. He has rendered a service to society. With bands of steel, he linked the great northwestern country, made the vast deserts spring forth with the scent of roses and the fragrance of blossoms, built cities where sand and sage bushes once dwelt. Civilization spread wherever Hill's industry led the way. Native soil was irrigated and turned into productive farms where roam vast herds of cattle, sheep and swine.

There was an abundance of food and water wherever Hill's civilization crept, and he was the benefactor. Not satisfied after providing one of the world's most famous railroads along whose lines thousands of dwellers found homes and wealth, Hill furnished free much of the stock that displaced the mongrel breeds and produced fine specimens of purity and quality. He purchased and donated to farmers, thoroughbred cattle, sheep, hogs and horses so that the strains might be improved. Hill bought these thoroughbreds, paid for them, and delivered them to the farmers without cost. Who then, would dare say that this giant builder was other than a human benefactor. Would that more men would build as substantial as Hill, for his monument of bulls will yield more to the cause of humanity than all the spires of marble and granite that ever pointed skyward.

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. LANSENG, Box 8 Allyn, Wash.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Will Assist Unemployed

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 1—Commissioner John Price Jackson of the Department of Labor and Industry establishes in Harrisburg today the central office of the State Employment Bureau, created by the last Legislature to relieve unemployment within the state and to guide children into vocations for which they are best adapted. The State Employment Bureau will also supervise all commercial employment agencies operating within the state.

Jacob Lightner, director of the Employment Bureau, who will be in charge of the central office here, will, within the next two years, establish two branch offices at Pittsburgh and at Philadelphia, and later will co-operate with municipalities in any part of the state where branch exchanges are desired.

The employment bureau of the Department of Labor and Industry will carry out the provisions of two acts passed by the last Legislature. One act virtually establishes, under state supervision, free employment agencies where unemployed persons may apply for information regarding employment in any line of work, and where employers may file their requests for laborers, skilled or unskilled.

The machinery of the bureau is to be extended to all sections of Pennsylvania and an interchange of information will be started with the National Employment Bureau at Washington.

In cities where compulsory education bureaus are maintained by the public school system, a division of vocational guidance will operate within the Compulsory Education Bureau in conjunction with the State Employment Bureau. Plans for such action have already been formulated by representatives of the State Department of Labor and Industry and the school authorities of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The division of the vocational guidance is to aid children between the ages of 14 and 16 years to get work and to facilitate the efforts of employers desiring to hire children. A child desiring to leave school to enter employment will first make application to the principal of the school and the principal will forward the application card to the division of vocational guidance with the pupil's record.

In supplying child workers to employers preference will be given children who, in the judgment of the chief of the Bureau of Compulsory Education, need work because of economic conditions.

CHAPTER XLVI.

By Process of Elimination.

The weapon of the renegade leader Blake was aimed steadily enough. But the fraction of time in which Roleau changed the position he had taken saved the life of one man and cost that of another.

It was the fellow thief, Blake's comrade, fresh from the rendezvous, who fell under the bullet intended for Roleau himself.

Blake sprang forward, groping under cover of the smoke, to find the body of his enemy, stooped, paused, sprang back—it was not Roleau, but his own man whom he had slain!

Roleau by this time, with no more than a quick flash of self-congratulation at his unexpected safety, had sprung away. Blake called out to his followers and started after Roleau. He did not meet him at the outer opening, but ran into the arms of the band of gendarmes who had followed Roleau hither.

Seeing the renegade, pistol in hand and knowing that he had fired the shot just heard, the sergeant seized upon Blake and disarmed him. The apache leader fought with all the bitter desperation of his kind when cornered, crying aloud for help. His cries brought others of the band, who joined in the melee, so that the issue for a time was in doubt as between the lawful and the lawless—these last two factions who were locked in struggle by reason of the fortunes of the missing coin.

At this juncture Roleau flung himself into the conflict. His giant strength proved such aid that finally the sergeant and his men had subdued not only Blake the leader, but others of his band. As for Roleau, he stood grinning at the turn of events and making no further attempt at escape. Neither did the officer make any movement to apprehend him again.

"Come with me, then, my friend," said the officer. "You have fought well for me. We shall see what we shall see."

Wherefore Roleau, no longer under espionage, went back with the gendarmes toward the headquarters of the prefecture.

Much of this was noted by Kitty Gray herself, who arrived upon the scene in time to witness this not unhappy end of her own quest. Count Frederick in turn found his own errand done. These two likewise turned toward the Hotel de Ville.

"Monsieur le prefect," announced the servant, when at last they had reached the presence of that official, "this man"—pointing to Blake—"fired on this other man and tried to kill him. That is what I do not understand."

The sound of the entrance of others at the office now attracted their attention.

"Your excellency," announced the sergeant, "these others, the young American—Count Frederick—"

The prefect turned his gaze upon the new arrivals, himself none too well pleased. He found them but complicating factors here in his own business of finding a victim for the law.

"What do you say now to this, sir?" —he accosted Roleau.

"I say now, your excellency, that yonder thief and leader of thieves, who tried to kill me, knows all there is to be known of the murder. He can tell, if he likes, or if he does not like. He wanted there what we wanted—we will call it a jewel that he sought in her gracious excellency's rooms. He guessed that it might have value with persons high in power in this country. That is why he followed us; that is why murder was done there. They all sought something, and we know what it was."

"You are the accused," said the prefect, turning swiftly to Blake, his own decision made. "What have you to say? Why do you not speak? Confess that you know the secret of yonder murder—the motive for which we ourselves now know. I know you, Blake. Your band is broken now. How do you wish to spend the rest of your life—would you purchase a few more moments at the price of a confession of the truth? Perhaps that may be, when you have tasted the dungeon—away from that drug you crave—for a few hours."

"I will confess," suddenly exclaimed the king of the apaches, his face gray with terror. "I will tell you everything—only give me—it."

"Then you killed the man in yonder room?"

Blake tried to speak, but only nodded. Then at length, hoarsely, "It is as he said. What can I gain by delay or by denial? Give me—that! Give me—it! I confess it all."

"What was your motive, then, Blake?"

"You heard it. He told you. I wanted what they had—the coin—the Gretzhoffen coin."

"As to the coin your honor," broke in the deep voice of Count Frederick at this time, "I submit there is no need of examination of anyone in regard to that.

The prefect looked at him, willing to punish any who cast slight upon his power, but knowing himself helpless. Count Frederick smiled icily in turn.

"Shall we three bid you good day, your honor?"

The perfect bowed politely as he might.

Count Frederick only smiled, and turned toward the door. He stepped back, gravely, allowing Kitty Gray to pass. After her followed the faithful Roleau. Frederick smiled again, and looked after the two not unhappily, although he saw where the greater allegiance of his former servant now lay.

"At last, Roleau!" exclaimed Kitty, eagerly, when finally they two were alone at their hotel. "We are free, all of us—you, and I, and—"

He Heard the Deep Voice of Sachio.

WEEKS' SPECIAL EXTRAORDINARY FEATURES

SATURDAY—Chapter 19 of "The Diamond From the Sky" with $10,000 offered for the best suggestion. It is known and famed the world over. Many people do not sleep on Friday night for fear they might over sleep and miss our Saturday show. The manager of the Olympic is one of them.

She Was Relieved.

"I had to use linseed oil rubbing my hands today, bruised from shaking hands by the patrons of the Olympic, congratulating me for the great picture "Jewel." The eyes of many ladies became larger and red of course from crying, but the funniest of all was when I noticed a lady with a handkerchief in her mouth, beat it home hurriedly. Upon my inquiry yesterday why she didn't speak, but only motioned, telling me that "Jewel" was fine, she said she wanted to cry so bad she had to hurry home to burst out crying. She did it and she felt relieved. Of course it was not our faut, it was Ella Hall's fault. She said she was choked from tears over joy and satisfaction.

Remember tomorrow, Saturday, we have the usual goods.—Olympic. 1t
